Where is Your 1915 Car Now

with no mention in the "Used Car" THOLE weeks go by classified columns of 1915 models-and few of 1916.

Why? Worn out already or perhaps out of style?

Possibly you can answer for two or three or more of various makes.

We can answer for Packard by pointing to Packards of 1915-1909-even earlier-still in active use by the original owners.

You see these long-lived

Packards on our streets every day-probably without realizing it-for they still look up-to-date and their performance is still right.

THE Packard Company has proved time and again that building a car which will look good outwardly after six years or more is futile unless the mechanical parts will last as long as the body.

To the man who is buying a new and so-called "high grade" car season after season-we say-you can certainly have better motoring and probably lower costs by owning a Packard Twin Six.

Ask the man who owns one
